CHANDLER LOBBY

The Chandler Lobby is a tall, daylit room built from a few strong materials. One wall is faced in large dark panels of bronze metal fixed with exposed fasteners, above a band of brown veined marble that holds a linear fireplace. Pale wood paneling and troweled gray plaster complete the room, and tall windows hung with sheer curtains admit the daylight.

A cascading chandelier of glass globes, hung among strands of dark metal mesh, falls through the height of the room above the seating, beside slender linear pendants. Gray upholstered armchairs gather around a low stone-topped table on a dark patterned carpet, and the reception desk stands beyond, against the windows.
